Art Unit: 1724

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hamilton et al (U.S. Patent No. 3,711,401) in view of Kunin et al (U.S. Patent No. 6,340,712). Hamilton et al discloses regenerating an ion exchange resin with a downward flow of regenerant solution and subsequently washing this resin in an upward direction (see col. 5, lines 4-15). Furthermore, this reference alternates service and regeneration cycles for the ion exchange resins disclosed therein, and this is all that is required by the "repeating" language of claim 1. Accordingly, Hamilton et al discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the use of ultra-pure water to wash the regenerated resin. Kunin et al teaches (see col. 6, lines 2-3) washing a regenerated ion exchange resin with ultra-pure water; and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use such ultra-pure water to rinse and/or backwash the regenerated resins of Hamilton et al, in order to minimize contamination of these resins.

Claims 3 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hamilton et al and Kunin et al as applied above, and further in view of Saieva (U.S. Patent No. 4,652,352). The modified primary reference discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the specific material from which the processing equipment is constructed. Saieva discloses (see col. 5, line 33) employing an ion exchange resin column constructed from a vinyl chloride resin (i.e. PVC); and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to construct the column and other parts of the modified primary reference from such a vinyl chloride resin, in order to obtain the advantages associated with this material (e.g. non-corrosive environment, lower construction costs, etc.) for the system of the modified primary reference.

Crits (U.S. Patent No. 3,531,401) discloses (see col. 2, lines 13-17; and Fig. 1) repeatedly contacting an ion exchange resin with regenerant solution.
